Cost is kept low by reduced staff requirements, and regulation may be less onerous than other models. Portable to rural areas, and can be tailored to available local resources.	The Village Model is limited to fifteen vehicles or shelter units, and it may, but need not operate 24 hours with two staff on site at all times. In addition to 1 employee for every 30 participants, other staff may be trained volunteers including participants. Participants commit to a 10 hours per week of community work. No tenancy is established.	The Low Barrier Model is for service-intensive sites without the cost or time to build traditional shelters. Data collection and monitoring of participants is required; 24/7 operation is allowed at the provider's discretion.
