I am very concerned about the recent move of the Board of Supervisors to change the direction of the General Plan update by diluting the Guiding Principles. Developed as a result of four years of public meetings with more than 2,000 Humboldters weighing in on their priorities for the County, the current guiding principles aim at concentrating growth in existing housing areas and maintaining the integrity of timber and agricultural lands. For the Board of Supervisors to turn their backs on that painfully careful public process challenges any notion of responsive government. Michele McKeegan
