I am a neighboring rancher to this proposed project and my husband and I are 100% in favor of this addition to our county's efforts to move to environmentally sound generation of energy. It has been mandated by the state of California and all county citizens should support this conversion by varying increments to total alternative energy sources. I do not think this will do great harm to the environment. This company, Terra-Gen has done a detailed survey and studies of their proposed project. Other counties and residents of other areas have been pleased with the company's work in wind development. Humboldt county residents have always championed natural and environmentally sound projects in our county and state. We should jump on this opportunity to be a forerunner in wind generated energy for our state. Some residents are for alternative energy, just not in their "backyards". That sounds like we are not really true believers in helping the environment around us. I attended the presentation at The Steeple in Ferndale in May and it seemed like many people don't want clean energy projects here. We would be greatly impacted by the activity next to our ranch, but we are supportive as it is the right thing to do for our fellow humans on this planet. People were upset with the thought of unsightly towers, but none of those people travel that ridge. They are hardly detectable from Highway 101. It will not affect their water sources as they live out of the watershed. The few birds affected will be no threat to the species' populations. It will not harm our cows or sheep even at the base of those towers. I want the commission to allow this great enterprise to come into our county. And I want all the supervisors to welcome alternative energy into our county by allowing this project to go forward.
